We take pride in America - in her laborers and her business people, in her factories and her products. We are proud to say that our buildings are 100% American made.

Ask Topline owners Lucas, Jacob and their dad Kim Hocker what they like best about work, and you'll get a simple answer: "Family." One way or another, the Hocker family has been working the steel business for the last 20 years. "It all started way back when dad decided to start selling steel Quonset huts to Kansas farmers." Since then, the company has grown and evolved. The Hockers still deal regularly with the farmers of the Midwest, but also sells to Fortune 500 CEOs. "That's the great thing about what I do every day. I get to meet great people and help them build something worthwhile."

OUR STORY

A lot has changed over the years. The Hocker family has grown and so has the business. What began with Quonset huts has now become a business that constructs steel barns, churches and schools, aircraft facilities, gymnasiums and storage centers. The Hockers have been working steel for two generations and expect to be in the business for generations to come. With an outlook like that, you can count on solid customer care. "Over 80% of our business is from repeat customers or referrals." Each building project is as unique as the customer, and each is treated with special care. When you choose Topline, you choose the Hockers—considerate people in an imperfect world. That's our story. We look forward to hearing yours! Call Topline today.
